

Author(s): Abelson, Robert

Title: Results of Vote Validation Experiment

Date: February 23, 1990

Dataset(s): 1989 Pilot Study

Abstract

Abelson finds that the 1989 Pilot Study experimental item measuring electoral participation failed to reduce over report of voting turnout. Abelson also presents statistical evidence to indicate that presidential voting turnout levels are initially more readily exaggerated than congressional voting. As time passes, however, this trend reverses.