

Complete data and documentation for the ANES 2008-2009 Panel Study are now available

Dear ANES user community:

We write to let you know that the complete data and documentation for the ANES 2008-2009 Panel Study are now available. This study includes data from 22 surveys conducted with the same panel of respondents between January 2008 and October 2009. Ten surveys were primarily about politics and the other 12 were about a variety of other topics.

The Panel Study includes questions about the primary campaign and general election, attitudes on race, the Affect Misattribution Procedure (AMP), the brief Implicit Association Test (IAT), social networks, policy preferences, evaluations of George W. Bush and Barack Obama, interest in politics, and a host of other political and non-political questions. To leverage the panel design, many questions were repeated, with the same respondents answering at two or more points in time.
